Comparative Literature Minor

Coordinators: Compte, Hustis, Landreau, Peterson, Steinberg

The minor in Comparative Literature offers students a unique opportunity to study literature across cultural and linguistic boundaries. The discipline of comparative literature traditionally focuses on literary phenomena that traverse national and linguistic frontiers, such as broad literary periods or trends, genres and stylistic conventions, reception, literary influence, theories of literature and aesthetics, and intertextuality. Through the systematic comparison of literary works from more than one culture or era, students of comparative literature come to a clearer understanding of what literature is—its forms and traditions—as well as its relation to adjacent fields such as art, history, language, and philosophy.

In consultation with an adviser, students who minor in Comparative Literature are expected to design an intellectually coherent program of study which focuses on the literature of at least two distinct cultures (e.g., French and African literature of the French colonial period, classical literature and the Renaissance, or Latin-American and U.S. literature of the twentieth century). While courses in fulfillment of this requirement may be drawn from a wide range of disciplines, including English, Modern Languages, Philosophy, Classical Studies, African-American Studies, Women’s and Gender Studies, and the Honors Program, the goal of the minor is to enable students to put the literatures of different cultures and eras in dialogue. This cultural and literary juxtaposition will culminate in a required capstone independent study designed by the student, approved by an adviser of the Comparative Literature Program, and supervised by a faculty member of the student’s choice.

Students interested in a minor in Comparative Literature should consult with one of the advisers in the program as early as possible to plan their program of study. No more than 6 credits earned toward the student’s primary major may be counted toward the minor in Comparative Literature.

COURSES (updated 11/6/03)

CMP 231/Perspectives on World Literature to 1800 4 cr.
(3 class hours)
(every semester)
same as LIT 231
replaces ENGL 217
Perspectives on the World: Literature, Western
Introduces students to selected literary traditions before 1800. The course will put readings into literary and historical context by focusing on a pivotal literary moment or text, selected by the instructor and analogous in function to the stationary foot of a geometric compass. Around this stationary foot or pivotal moment, the course will explore literary and historical relations—the textual “ancestors” and “progeny” that influenced or rewrote the pivotal text of the course, as well as the surrounding philological, social, and political contexts of the selected literary moment. The course will also draw upon at least two distinct cultures or traditions, at least one of which must be non-English-speaking.
