The Communication Studies Program

The communication studies program is a liberal arts major emphasizing theory and practice in a variety of settings for human and mediated communication. Topics include: communication campaigns, leadership, group problem solving, interpersonal skills, mass media effects, film and television production, documentary, radio production, social aspects of the media, political persuasion, organizational behavior, and the First Amendment. Some courses emphasize specific skills; others provide critical and conceptual frames for assessing a wide variety of messages. Students considering the major should be engaged and curious learners.

Students enrolled in the communication studies program select one of three concentrations (i.e., content areas): organizational/interpersonal communication, public/mass communication, and radio/television/film. The program also requires completion of core courses, but permits accommodation to individual interests through elective courses. Each student works with a faculty advisor to plan a program of study. Students are also encouraged to develop their creative talents and to apply classroom learning through participation in co-curricular activities, internships, research, and conference presentations.

Graduates from the Department of Communication Studies are strong candidates for positions in a variety of areas including administration, fundraising, public relations, human resources, advertising, sales, market research, media production and design, public affairs, and journalism. Students considering graduate school should take courses beyond the minimum requirement of 12 course units.

Program Entrance, Retention, and Exit Standards

Every major program at the College has set standards for allowing students to remain in that program, to transfer within the College from one program to another, and to graduate from a program. The following are the standards for communication studies:

- Retention in the program is based on the following performance standards in these critical content courses (A passing grade or better is required):
  - For all concentrations: COM 103/Introduction to Communication Studies.
  - For Organizational/Interpersonal concentration: COM 242/Interpersonal Communication.
  - For Public/Mass Communication concentration: COM 172/Introduction to Media Communication.
  - For Radio/Television/Film concentration: COM 117/Lang. of Film and TV; COM 212/Introduction to Television Studio; COM 269/Introduction to Radio and Audio Production.
- Transfer in the program from another program within the College is based upon the following performance standards in these “foundation courses” (a passing grade or better is required): COM 103/Introduction to Communication Studies.
- Graduation requires a GPA of 2.0 for the major.
